

READING THE SCORECARD

Why the fundamentals and the chart don't always agree.

Two different questions, two different scores — on purpose.

FUNDAMENTALS

Fundamentals describe the business.

Revenue growth. Profit margins. Debt load. Is the company itself getting healthier, or weaker.

TECHNICALS

Technicals describe the stock.

Price trend. Momentum. Overbought or oversold. Is the market currently rewarding the shares, or punishing them.

SAME TICKER, DIFFERENT ANSWERS

They can disagree — and that's useful.

FUNDAMENTALS

8/10

- healthy revenue growth
- solid margins

VS

TECHNICALS

3/10

- textbook downtrend
- poor 90-day momentum

WHY IT MATTERS

Averaging them would hide it.

Blend two disagreeing scores into one number and the disagreement disappears with it — along with the information it was carrying.

The Dispatch scores each dimension separately, so the disagreement stays visible.
