

A MYTH, CORRECTED

A rating is not a prediction.

It's a summary — and the summary isn't the interesting part.

THE MYTH

BUY

"A Buy rating means guaranteed upside."

That's not what a rating is — on The Dispatch, or anywhere else.

WHAT A RATING ACTUALLY IS

A snapshot, not a promise.

Weighted signals, collapsed into one label at one moment in time:

- + revenue growing
- margins compressing
- leverage elevated
- + chart in an uptrend

SAME LOGIC, A DIFFERENT MYTH

"A low P/E means it's cheap."

A low multiple can mean undervalued. It can also mean the market already knows about a problem you haven't found yet.

WHAT ACTUALLY MATTERS

The reasoning is the substance.

The label is just the summary. The reasoning underneath it is where the real information lives.

Read the reasoning, not just the rating.
